In the last years, the topic of Migration and Health has gained more relevance, due to high increase of mobile populations around the world, the struggles of health systems to provide adequate services to newcomers, and the polarize opinions on how to address migration. Now more than ever, researchers and health professionals need to receive new training, gain skills, and share best practices in the arena of migrant health.

Taking place in Oakland, California, on June 18-21, the Summer Institute on Migration and Global Health will give you access to insights from worldwide national and international recognized experts who will teach the relationship between migration and global health from a diverse array of perspectives. This will be a great opportunity for researchers, students and professionals to learn about various health issues affecting mobile populations, and to create new professional networks.

Space is limited!
Early registration rate ends on May 18th.

REGISTER HERE

Some of our wonderful speakers:

Karen Carpio is the Regional Coordinator for the Joint Initiative on the Health of Migrants and their Families at IOM’s Regional Office for Central America, North America and the Caribbean. She specializes in the management of health, mental health and psychosocial response programs and policies for vulnerable populations. She has worked as a consultant for PAHO/WHO Costa Rica in mental health topics, and as researcher for the Global Mental Health Program of Ivan School of Medicine in New York. She is an adjunct professor of Clinical and Health Psychology at the University of Costa Rica.

Marc Schenker, MD, MPH is a Distinguished Professor of Medicine and Public Health at UC Davis. Dr. Schenker has over 30 years of experience in medicine and public health. He is the founding director of the Davis Center for Occupational and Environmental Health, the Western Center for Agricultural Health and Safety and the Migration and Health Research Center. He conducts epidemiologic research with a particular focus on immigrants and farm working populations. Dr. Schenker has conducted work on occupational health hazards in the U.S. and Latin America, and has worked on global health committees and programs with collaborators around the world.

Palmira Inamorado works in the Migration and Health Programme at the WHO Regional Office for Europe, Copenhagen. She is a Medical Doctor, Specialist in Public Health. She has collected international professional experience with a particular focus on migration, maternal and child health in Senegal, Tanzania and Uganda. In Italy she worked with the Epidemiological Observatory of the Health Department of the Region of Sicily supporting the local health authorities in addressing the public health response to the influx of migration in the Mediterranean area.

The 13th Summer Institute on Migration and Global Health is organized by:

Berkeley School of Public Health
UCMEXICO
MANRC
Medi-Global
International Institute

Follow the conversation: #SIMGH18

Our Sponsors: